

Devour!: The nomadic film and food festival comes to Fogo Island

On Fogo Island, Newfoundland

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Fogo Island, NL., Tuesday, October 24, 2017—Devour! The Food Film Fest, the largest film festival in the world devoted to all things culinary, comes to Fogo Island. Chef Michael Howell, festival founder, will collaborate with the Fogo Island Inn Kitchen Collective to create an unforgettable six-course dinner menu pairing six award-winning films with ingredients sourced from the lands and waters of Fogo Island. Bringing true meaning to the phrase “watch what you eat,” guests will take in the award-winning short films that inspire each course and explore Fogo Island over three days and two nights, beginning Friday, November 3 to Sunday, November 5, 2017.

It's only fitting that Devour! The Food Film Fest travels to Fogo Island, which has a time-honoured connection to film. It was this tiny island off the north coast of Newfoundland that hosted the legendary 1960s filmmaking project known around the world as the Fogo Process. Capturing the stories and challenges of cod-fishing Fogo Islanders and their changing way of life, the Fogo Process films are credited with helping to establish the Fogo Island Co-operative Society, which still owns the Island's fishery to this day. Community Hosts will recall for guests their own experiences with the Fogo Process filmmaking project and the collaborative spirit it engendered. Other films on the weekend roster celebrate food stories from around the world, touching on sustainability, unique culinary traditions, and the colourful characters who have devoted their lives to the art of cooking. The Devour! Food & Film Weekend, with films curated by Lia Rinaldo, Managing Director of Devour! The Food Film Fest, includes a Friday evening film reception accompanied by a chowder cook-off, Saturday hikes and foraging walks along coastal trails capped off with an epic film-inspired supper, and concludes with a foraged Sunday breakfast and farewell film reel.

Just as Devour! The Food Film Fest has thrived on its movability—transplanting itself from one Canadian city to another—so too will characterize the Devour! Food & Film Weekend on Fogo Island. The films (running 2 to 13 minutes) that inspire each course served in several locations throughout the Inn include: From Milpa to Mesa (a 2-minute film about heirloom corn in Mexico); In A Nutshell (an inspirational 6-minute animation); Bacon & Greens (a lovely, lyrical take on the staples of Irish cooking – boiled meat, potatoes and greens); Cod-Pot Fishing Fogo (featuring life-long Fogo Islanders Aubrey and Marie Payne and their sustainable method of fishing); Why This Road: Dan Portelance (a tear-inducing glimpse into the life of a Massachusetts cook who encounters one obstacle after another); Fruit (a thoughtful and quirky piece by Croatian director Ivan Mirko Senjanović); and, appropriately for the end of the meal, Cheese (by Canadian film director Hannah Cheesman).

Sunday morning screenings begin in the Dining Room over a special parting breakfast. This farewell screening of yet more film gems includes: The Ovens of Cappoquin, about a small bakery in County Waterford, Ireland; Mr. Salty, showcasing Newfoundland Peter Burt's salt production technique; The Land, The Sea focused on longtime deep sea fisherman turned goat farmer, Gabriel Flaherty of Aran Islands Goats Cheese; and finally, Fogo Island's own story of Hand. Line. Cod, Justin Simms' NFB film that follows the reversal of a 20-year moratorium on North Atlantic cod fishing and the fishermen leading the sustainable revolution in this remote place. Like all of the amazing films in the Devour! The Food Film Fest line-up, the subject always comes back to food, which is at the very heart of Fogo Island.

The DEVOUR! FOOD & FILM WEEKEND (Friday, November 3 to Sunday, November 5, 2017) experience includes a two-night stay at Fogo Island Inn, all meals, Friday evening reception, film and food pairings, and a half-day Community Host Island orientation.
